DESCRIPTION OF THE AFGHAN HOUND

THE progress made by Afghan Hounds since the war has been most encouraging and many handsome dogs are regularly exhibited. Whenever they are seen they excite comment by their racial peculiarities and dignified bearing. Of the many foreign breeds that have enriched our domestic canine they are probably the most singular in appearance, the longish coats which extend to the feet of all four legs, the top-knot of long silky hair, the well feathered ears (pendulous in shape) the smooth face and brow and the thin tail curling at the tip, are all striking features. The body is of the Greyhound type but somewhat heavier and not so prominently arched on the loins. The brisket is deep, the belly tucked up, loins muscular, neck arched, long and graceful and well let into sloping shoulders. The tail is set low, giving a rounded appearance to the rump; legs long with hocks placed very low; head long with scarcely any stop; eyes dark; feet longish and well protected with hair. The usual colour is fawn sometimes lightish and others nearly red; black and brindles are occasionally seen. Afghan Hounds, having good house manners, make excellent companions.
